Highlights of Delhi

Shop/ Bargain & Win Game ~ AT SPICE MARKET OF OLD DELHI Concept is to give Fix amount of Indian money to each couple or team together with specific target & Time to Bargain to the most and buy number of products. Winner will be given special incentive.

Chandni Chowk meaning the 'Moonlight Square' was designed and laid by Jahanara Begum, Mughal emperor Shahajahan's daughter between the Red Fort and Fateh Puri Masjid. In a way the street reflects the national unity, secularism and diversity of India as it houses many important places of worship of major religions of the world. The bazaar has several galis (lanes). Each of these galis represents a specialty of this market, for example the parathawali gali famous for its parathas.

The bustling bazaar hosts authentic Indian food, delicacies and sweets of more than 1,000 kinds, to sarees with intricate embroidery. There are lots of narrow lanes with many shops selling books, clothing, shoes and leather goods, electronic and consumer goods and what not. The area, even more so than the rest of the city, is very congested but a 'not to be missed experience'.

In the Indian metropolis of Delhi, visit the largest spice market in all of Asia, the bustling Khari Baoli bazaar. Open air shops on both sides of the road display sackcloth bags filled with pungent spices, bushels of fragrant flowers, nuts and sticky dried fruits, mountains of bright orange turmeric, mouth-watering sweets, gallons of gooey ghee and enough tea
